New rules for recording accidents at work

New rules for evidence from 1/1/2015

Since 1 January 2015, employers must deal with a new set of obligations imposed by the amended Government Regulation No. 201/2010 Coll.

The main change is the level of detail in which records must be kept. Employers are now obliged to provide a detailed description of the accident that resulted in injury. Details of the records and the way in which responsible employees deal with the matter may have a significant impact on the legal position of both the employer and the employee in any disputes about liability for the work accident.

The employee is entitled to a certified copy of the Accident Record

If requested, the employer is now obliged to issue a certified copy or data extract from the Accident Records Book.
